Discover authentic flavors and stories from our local guide as you explore Bari's culinary gems.

Experience an unforgettable, immersive food tour that amounts to a full meal—or even more! Our dedicated local guide will take you on a culinary journey through Bari's historic center, exploring authentic flavors based on the best seasonal ingredients available. This comprehensive culinary journey typically includes tasting the Focaccia Barese, a local institution that is soft on the inside and crispy on the outside, traditionally topped with tomatoes and olives, which we will sample at one of Bari's most famous historic bakeries. The tour continues with genuine local street foods such as Sgaglie, simple yet addictive fried squares of seasoned polenta, and Popizze, fluffy, round pancakes of leavened dough. An absolute highlight is the Panzerotto, a classic savory fried pastry typically filled with mozzarella and tomato, which you will taste just like the locals do. For a taste of the sea, we will savor the Octopus Sandwich, a typical Apulian delicacy featuring grilled octopus seasoned with a splash of oil and lemon, served in a bun. 4 tastings - Based on availability and seasonality, there will be 4 tastings included among the following:

Focaccia barese: born in the bakeries of Bari's old port, this iconic flatbread is made with ground semolina, boiled potatoes, salt, yeast and water, then left to rise slowly. Soft inside and beautifully crisp outside, it is crowned with sweet cherry tomatoes, olives and local oregano. Considered a true symbol of the city, it is eaten at any hour, from breakfast to late-night snack. We'll taste it in one of Bari's most loved historic bakeries, just as locals do.

Sgaglie: these golden squares of fried polenta are the pride of Bari's home cooks, traditionally prepared by women who sell them directly from their doorsteps in the historic center. Cooked in large pans until delicately crisp, they are sprinkled with salt and eaten still steaming. Simple yet deeply comforting, sgaglie capture the humble, resourceful spirit of Apulian cuisine and are best enjoyed while wandering the narrow stone streets of Bari Vecchia.

Popizze: small, round fritters of leavened dough, popizze are Bari's answer to the most irresistible street snack. Light and airy inside with a thin, golden crust, they are often enjoyed plain with just a pinch of salt, letting the fragrance of the dough speak for itself. Traditionally prepared for village festivals and family gatherings, today they mark any ordinary day with true delight. After tasting them warm from the fryer, you'll understand why locals can never have just one.

Panzerotto: this beloved half-moon of dough, fried to a blistered crunch, is the undisputed king of Bari's street food. The classic filling of melted mozzarella and tomato recalls the flavors of pizza, but sealed inside a pocket that you can enjoy on the go. Families guard their own recipes for the dough and fillings, from spicy salami to seasonal vegetables. On our tour, you'll discover the panzerotto shop that locals recommend to friends – an essential bite before you can truly say goodbye to Bari.

Octopus sandwich: a true Apulian specialty born along the Adriatic coast, this sandwich celebrates the region's fishing traditions. Fresh octopus is gently grilled until tender, then tucked into crusty local bread and seasoned with extra-virgin olive oil, lemon and aromatic herbs. Each bite balances smoky, citrusy and briny notes, evoking the nearby harbor and its daily catch. It's a street food that perfectly expresses Bari's deep connection to the sea.

Ice cream: your Bari street food adventure ends with a scoop of artisanal Italian ice cream made by a traditional gelateria. Prepared in small batches with seasonal fruits, local nuts and fresh dairy, each flavor reflects the craftsmanship that makes Italian gelato famous worldwide. Strolling the promenade or the old town with your cone in hand is a daily ritual for locals. It's a sweet, lingering finale to a walk through Bari's flavors and stories.

4 tastings - Based on availability and seasonality, there will be 4 tastings included among the following:

Rustico: A beloved symbol of Lecce's snack culture, the rustico is a warm, flaky pastry filled with silky béchamel, stretchy mozzarella, and a touch of tomato. You'll often see locals enjoying it at mid-morning or aperitivo time at the bar. Bite into the crisp, golden shell and you'll understand why this humble street snack is a true delight.

Puccia: Born from the rustic traditions of Salento, the puccia is a wood-fired, round bread split open and stuffed to the brim. Fillings can range from grilled sausage and local cheeses to sun-dried tomatoes, seasonal vegetables, and fragrant olive oil. It's the kind of street food workers, students, and families grab on the go – a portable feast that captures the generous, countryside flavors of Puglia in one hearty bite.

Pittule: Pittule are golden fritters that appear on every Lecce table when there's something to celebrate – from Christmas markets to village festivals. The dough is light and airy, sometimes plain, sometimes enriched with olives, capers, or anchovies for a briny kick. Eaten steaming hot from the paper bag, they tell the story of Salento's simple, shared family recipes that have turned leftover dough into irresistible street food.

Caffè Leccese: More than just a drink, Caffè Leccese is a summertime ritual across Salento's cafés. Intense espresso is poured over ice and sweetened with almond syrup, a nod to the region's centuries-old almond-growing tradition. The result is a refreshing, layered coffee that's both velvety and energizing – locals linger over it in shaded piazzas while the afternoon heat shimmers on Lecce's baroque stone façades.

Pasticciotto: The pasticcio is Lecce's most iconic pastry, traditionally enjoyed warm for breakfast at the bar. A shortcrust shell, just firm enough to hold, cradles a rich, silky custard that melts as you bite. First created in nearby Galatina in the 18th century, this little tart has become a proud emblem of Salento's pastry art – simple, generous, and deeply comforting with every spoonful of coffee alongside.

Fruttone: With its glossy chocolate glaze and heart of almond paste, fruttone is a classic dessert of Lecce's convent baking tradition. Beneath the dark coating, you'll find a dense, fragrant almond filling that sometimes hides a layer of jam or candied fruit. Once reserved for feast days and religious celebrations, today it brings a taste of the city's sweet heritage to pastry counters, one carefully crafted bite at a time.

Gelato: In Lecce, gelato is an evening ritual as much as a dessert. Artisan gelaterie churn flavors that celebrate Salento's produce: intense pistachio, roasted almond, figs from nearby countryside, or tart seasonal fruits. Strolling past baroque churches with a cone in hand, you'll understand how locals turn a simple gelato into a slow, sweet way of enjoying the city's golden twilight streets.

Local Beer: Lecce's emerging craft beer scene pairs regional character with modern creativity. Small breweries experiment with local grains, citrus, and Mediterranean herbs, producing refreshing lagers and aromatic ales that match beautifully with salty fritters and rich cheeses. Sipping a cold pint in a lively piazza, you'll taste how contemporary Salento is reinterpreting its agricultural roots one glass at a time.
